Progressive round-robin: Players are initially divided into groups of 4, according to Australian rating, or equivalent. After the initial round-robin of 3 games, the subunits are changed - the best performer in each group of 4 is promoted, in favour of the player with the lowest result in the higher group.*

This action is repeated after game 6, based on performance in games 4 to 6.

*At the end of the day, the player with the best overall result (wins and margins over 9 games) will be awarded the winner's prize. This is usually not the highest rated player in the room (who will have had the most difficult tournament/hardest opponents, given the way this is structured.)*
